Content	The course has two strands. The first (Q1) strand focuses on the in-depth study of the infinitive, the gerund the participle and the modal auxiliaries. The course also contrasts different English and French structures with the aim of honing students' awareness of those that are typically problematic for translators. In the seconde part (Q2) the grammar course focuses on the in-depth study of the noun phrase (pre-modifiers, post-modifiers, plural of nouns), the adjective phrase and the adverb phrase. The course also contrasts different English and French structures with the aim of honing students' awareness of those that are typically problematic for translators. The students are asked to put the theory into practice in their personal written work, which is analysed and discussed in class. The translation course (A-C) of Q2 involves French to English translation exercises that focus on the uses of the different English tenses and on the most common usage difficulties.
