

emerges, which completely overhauls how companies brand themselves, how political parties strategize, how NGOs organize,...

This course provides an overview of how organizational communication operates in a multicultural environment and of how multicultural contexts condition communicative practices. This includes an introduction to the field of organisational communication, to the cultural approach to organizational communication, and to the methods and concepts most commonly used in this field. The course ensuingly uses this theoretical basis to explore concrete

