MUSI1BA - Teaching profile

Learning outcomes

The "Bachelor in History of Art and Archaeology: Musicology" effectively prepares students for entry into a Master's degree programme so that they can "become critical cultural players and active citizens who have an awareness of the world's socio-cultural issues and are able to involve themselves in the major challenges and issues of today's multicultural society".

By the end of their Bachelor's degree course in History of Art and Archaeology: Musicology, graduates will have acquired a number of

1. general optional training to consolidate a basic general culture (history courses by period, historical criticism, history of art and music, comparative approach to European literature, modern and ancient languages, philosophy, etc.).)
2. training in the arts and civilizations of the different periods and geographical areas of Western Europe (periods and geographical areas are chosen by the student);
3. training in all aspects of musicology (history, analysis, aesthetics, sociology, popular music, pop-rock music, organology, methodology, etc.).

The first year of the first cycle begins with a four-quarter course including general training common to historians, art historians and archaeologists. This common introduction to the fields of history, art history and literature provides a foundation for basic learning.

From the first four months of the first year, discipline-specific courses are also taught. These become the core of the course in the second four-month period of the first year. These include courses in musical training, introduction to musicology, music history, analysis, active listening and methodology. Particular attention is paid to outings and excursions (concerts or operas).

From the second year onwards, students pursue their major while being invited to broaden their intellectual and professional horizons by choosing a 30-credit minor from a varied list of minors common to the EHAC School.

Teaching method

Throughout the Bachelor's degree course in art history and archaeology, with a focus on musicology, students are exposed to a variety of teaching methods adapted to different learning objectives: lectures, group work, independent study, seminars, tutorials, oral presentations, field trips, concerts, visits to cultural sites, conferences, etc. Whatever the subject, the courses specific to the discipline are based on different teaching tools, all aimed at active learning.

Whatever the subject, discipline-specific courses draw on a variety of pedagogical tools, all aimed at active learning. Listening to music is omnipresent.

A team of teaching assistants is on hand to provide personalized support for students, particularly when it comes to methodological and analytical coursework.

Our teaching focuses not only on classical music, but also on pop-rock, traditional and popular music (ethnomusicology, world music, pop-rock music). Reflection on the very notion of music and the importance of sound in our society is deepened throughout the course, and students are encouraged to forge their own reflections on the "musical" (socio-anthropology of music, philosophy of music, etc.).

A number of specific visits and activities are organized during the so-called "smart week" (visits to the workshops of the Royal Opera of La Monnaie or the Liège Opera; visits to the MIM or other museums; meetings with musicians, event organizers, etc.). And throughout the bachelor's program, numerous scientific excursions, trips and concerts enable students to reinforce the knowledge acquired in the classroom. These outings are programmed by the teaching team in line with the subjects covered and with a view to progression.

Evaluation

The evaluation methods comply with the regulations concerning studies and exams. More detailed explanation of the modalities specific to each learning unit are available on their description sheets under the heading "Learning outcomes evaluation method".

Depending on the nature of the course and the teaching methods, the evaluation will take different forms. Some courses will involve oral and/or written evaluations (held during one of the three exam sessions: January – June – August/September), whilst the evaluation of seminars will involve more substantial student participation as well as assessment of individual course work. Evaluation methods will be explained at the beginning of each course.

Those exams relating to courses on communication skills will evaluate the student's level, i.e. the practical use of the language in relevant situations.

To obtain a student's average, the grades awarded for each course unit are weighted by their respective credits

Possible trainings at the end of the programme

This bachelor's programme provides direct access to the corresponding [Master \[120\] in History of Art and Archaeology: Musicology](#) and [Master \[60\] in History of Art and Archaeology: Musicology](#).
